I have over 8,800 followers on LinkedIn. This post has been reposted 16 times so far, has 78 comments and 89 people have reacted to it within less than 24 hours. Yet LinkedIn in its infinite wisdom has chosen to show it to just 2195 impressions. Cindy Gallop the pain is real.

Launch day here.
Back in January, we submitted our application to Innovate UK for what would become Breakthrough Founders. In February, we found out we'd been selected.

Since then, we've been through months of design, negotiations, planning, and sheer persistence. Today, we finally get to say: Breakthrough Founders is live.

This programme means a lot to me. It's not just about another accelerator or training package. It's a fully funded Innovate UK pilot created to give overlooked founders — women, ethnic minorities, disabled, neurodivergent, LGBTQIA+, primary carers, those from low-income or non-traditional backgrounds, young and old — a real shot at raising investment and scaling their businesses.

next 12 months.

It's also about showing what's possible when incredible partners come together with a shared vision. I'm so grateful to be working alongside Catalyst, Focused For Business, and Mint Ventures, alongside many brilliant individuals who've poured energy into shaping this.

Why does it matter? Because by backing a broader set of founders, we'll see a broader set of problems solved — in health, sustainability, finance, community resilience and more. That means more investable businesses, more capital put to work, and an innovation economy that truly reflects the UK's potential.

Applications open now! If you're a UK founder looking for investment (from ideation through to scaling) and you've ever felt overlooked, this was built with you in mind.

<https://lnkd.in/ekHypnJP>
This has been a long time coming. I can't wait to see what we achieve together.

Things That Don't Happen When You Hire/Promote/Value Women:

Matt Levine Bloomberg Opinion ...more

On February 16, 2019, Winata rented and paid for hotel rooms for himself and [the auditor] in Hollywood, Florida for February 26, 2019, to March 1, 2019. ...

On February 27, 2019, [the auditor] texted Winata: "I am back from dancing . I need some more dancing dollars."

This continued for years!

On February 23, 2022, [the auditor] texted Winata, in part: "This was the best trip I had in Florida. The girls were very beautiful and nice. On Thursday night there so many beautiful women. That's why I do many lap dances instead of going to the room. I hope we can have another trip before the Summer. Thanks again for making making the trip great and better before."

RCI was allegedly doing all of this to save money on sales taxes, but it's pretty clear that they did not enjoy any of it:

On June 15, 2018, [Rick's manager Shaun] Kevin texted Anakar: "Hopefully he really makes something happen" and "So many sketchy people in the public sector." ...

On or about September 1, 2023, at 6:44 p.m., [RCI Chief Financial Officer Bradley] Chhay emailed Langan and Anakar with the subject line "Fwd: NY Sales Tax Audit" and wrote: "Wow. Tim is clutch. But it did come with conditions. I'll tell you when I talk to you. Tim asked if this can be his last one. No more dealing with this type."

On or about September 1, 2023, at 6:44 p.m., Chhay texted Langan and Anakar: "Tim got the guy to $47k in vivid New York. But owes him a couple trips ed. And he said he has to keep his word. I'll update ya."

Yeah one problem is that if you bribe your auditor with trips to the strip club, that seems like a crime. But another problem is that you have to go to the strip club with your auditor.

The model has inspired countless clubs, associations and online discussion groups, not to mention other activities. A survey in France in 2023 found that 25 per cent of respondents had had sex in their car at least once, with the Clio the most popular vehicle for doing so, ahead of the BMW 3 and the Audi A4.

"Love redesigned" is the Clio 6 advertising slogan, which may be a subliminal reference to what Capital called a "more spacious and generous" interior.

LE CAR

On Sex in Cars

It's a huge, pragmatic business opportunity. The point is people have sex in cars, especially in markets where premarital sex is frowned upon, in markets where for social and cultural reasons, young people live at home with their parents till they get married. In markets where it's common for whole households to live together, commonly, and therefore, even the husbands and wives cannot find privacy to be intimate. All around the world, a huge number of people are having a huge amount of sex in a huge number of cars. And yet the automotive industry is spectacularly failing to factor this into product design and marketing. The car company that accepts that fact and requires that a car is designed specifically to be great for having sex in and then markets it on that premise cleans up.

Testing for Bias in the LinkedIn Algorithm
August 2025
Authors: Jane Evans, Matt Lawton

Background

Over the last 3-6 months a growing number of LinkedIn users have reported a drop in reach for their content. The majority of users reporting this decline are women and people of color who didn't change their content cadence or subject matter. This provoked us to begin to explore the impact of algorithmic preference and apparent bias towards those communities.

In July 2025, four LinkedIn members conducted a test, posting exactly the same content to see whether there would be differences in how it performed and whether that indicated a potential gender based bias.

The test participants were: Cindy Gallop - 136,000 followers; Jane Evans - 17,000 followers; Matt Lawton - 7,500 followers and Stephen McGinnis - 600 followers.

The results were extraordinary and attracted a lot of attention.

My posts last week were a bit different to normal. That's because, along with Cindy Gallop, Jane Evans and my colleague Stephen McGinnis, I was testing whether the LinkedIn algorithm may have an unfair bias against women and is suppressing their content.

The same content published by all of us. Cindy's reached 801 people (0.6% of her followers); Jane's reached 1,327 people (8.3% of her followers); Steve's reached 328 people (51% of his followers); and Stephen's reached 4,408 people (14.3% of my followers). Let that sink in.

Jane Evans is compiling some interesting findings in a webinar series called 'Wrangling the Algorithm' and would welcome more support from men I'm sure, ahead of speaking at the Amy Kean Link Laugh Love summit on August 18th.

The attention this post generated (>60,000 impressions, >1,200 reactions, >450 comments and >250 reposts) helped us identify volunteers for a larger test designed by Jane Evans to include

For Women Founders, Women's Venture Summit 2025 Offers Capital, Community, and Momentum

By Spencer Hulse

A Platform for Capital and Change

Keynote speakers underscore the Summit's mix of capital, culture, and leadership. Lauren B. Leichtman, Co-Founder of Levine Leichtman Capital Partners and the world's first woman private equity billionaire, will reflect on scaling both wealth and impact. Cindy Gallop, founder of MakeLoveNotPorn, brings her unapologetic voice on equity and inclusion. Vlada Bortnik, CEO and Co-Founder of Marco Polo, will share lessons from building purpose-driven technology at scale. Andrea Holland, executive coach and strategist, will round out the lineup with insights on leading through high-stakes moments.

If you followed my posts last week, there was an incident with AI gender bias that prompted a few questions. One of my favourite sci-fi books is "I, Robot" by Isaac Asimov. This might explain my curiosity to learn how AI ...more

ChatGPT 5 3. How we can work together toward gender equality in agent-assisted outputs Share

Here's what I propose in practical steps:

A. In our interactions

- Bias check mode: We can explicitly review responses together for balance — asking, for example: Are both genders represented equally? or Does this advice frame leadership differently for men and women?
- Inclusive archetypes: You can prompt me to intentionally use female exemplars in leadership, innovation, or hero roles. I'll prioritize more balanced representation in examples and metaphors.
- Transparent reflection: If I generate an output that seems skewed, I'll flag that possibility and suggest alternatives.

B. In methodology

- Testing protocol: We can design "bias tests" — e.g., running identical prompts but swapping gendered references — and track how advice differs. That would build your own evidence base for presentations, workshops, or advocacy.
- Source curation: When pulling in external material, I can prioritize sources that intentionally include women experts and diverse voices (journals, NGOs, regional outlets).

C. In the bigger picture

- Push for platform accountability: You could use your findings (with screenshots and systematic tests) to advocate for more transparency from Google, LinkedIn, and others about how their systems are evaluated for gender bias.
- Model "fair defaults": In training human rights or sustainability audiences, we could incorporate "AI fairness literacy" — teaching people how to spot and counter bias in AI outputs.
- Feedback loop: Whenever you flag biased outputs here, I'll adapt my style with you to avoid repeating the pattern.

AGENCIES

Sarah Thompson Returns to GS&P as First CEO

Droga5 vet relocates to New York to lead the agency's next chapter

15 HOURS AGO | 3 MIN READ

CEO 43

Gallop as an account executive on Levi's for BBH New York when the office was still only about 40 people.

For Ms. Thompson, Ms. Gallop was the boss who made sure she made it to the next rung of the ladder. "She wanted to promote me to the head of account management, but I was running Levi's, a big important account, and I said, 'I just don't think I can take it on right now.'"

Ms. Thompson thought that was the end of the discussion. A month later, Ms. Gallop came back and told her she wasn't going to let her pass up the promotion and that she had arranged for the agency, not the client, to pay for more people. She also found Ms. Thompson a partner to share the workload. "Having someone believe in me to that extent, and push me out of my comfort zone, certainly was crucial. It allowed me to grasp a bigger leadership role."
